Marianne E. Felice, MD

Dr. Felice is a Pediatrician and an Adolescent Medicine Subspecialist. After completing two fellowships (Behavioral Pediatrics and Adolescent Medicine) at the University of Maryland Medical School in Baltimore, she was recruited to the University of California San Diego to be the Founding Division Chief of a new Division of Adolescent Medicine. Ten years later, she was recruited back to the University of Maryland to become the Division Chief of the Program in which she had trained and to be Vice Chair of the Department of Pediatrics. In 1998, Dr. Barry Hanshaw recruited her to the University of Massachusetts to be the Chair of Pediatrics, a position she held for 14 years. Dr. Felice was the only woman chair at the medical school for 10 years. Three years after Dr. Felice arrived in Worcester, she was asked to be the Interim CEO of UMass Memorial Health Care, a position she held for about a year while the permanent CEO was identified. In 2012, Dr. Felice stepped down as the Chair of Pediatrics but has continued to teach in the medical school and the department and she continues to mentor many younger women who aspire to leadership positions. In her spare time, she serves on several Boards of Directors, plays tennis as often as she can, and practices the drums.

ABOUT THE ORATION

All physicians are leaders even if they do not hold the title of "Leader". They lead in their offices, in their teaching sessions, in their committee meetings, and many have leadership roles in their communities. In this oration, Dr. Felice will list the ten key lessons she has learned from her leadership roles in the last 35 years when she has been a Division Chief, a Department Chair, an Interim CEO of a major health care system, and/or a leader in a variety of medical societies. Her talk will be peppered with personal examples of how to lead well and how to lead poorly.
